A message from the Head of School to Parents...

With great power comes great responsibility. We have all been enjoying the snow this week. We hope you have at home too. We are pleased to have been able to stay open to support our critical worker families, thank you to the staff for getting into school where possible, so we have been able to do this.

World Week: Climate in Crisis: This week has seen our children learn about climate change. The causes, effects and solutions. We may just have the next Greta Thunberg amongst us? Here is a small selection of work from children across the school. Please take a moment to look on our Gallery section on our website, under the Children's tab for more photos.

Parent consultations: We have decided to postpone the parent consultations that were due to take place in the week beginning 1st March. We will re-schedule these once all pupils are back in school.

Values: This term has seen children exceed our expectations at school and at home in terms of their resilience and commitment to learning. The following children have received certificates displaying our school values. If you are at home, you will receive your badge and certificate in the post. Well done to you all.

All the staff at Wingham would like to say thank you for the extremely generous donation from families across the school. It was hard to know quite how to verbalise how much it meant to us all, when we know how difficult it has been for everyone over the past couple of months, not just for us. There is a video on the Children/ Gallery tab on our website for everyone who played a part in the organisation and donation. Please have a watch, there are messages to you from everyone. We will be enjoying a weekly Wednesday lunch for the next term! We have also enjoyed a huge selection of baked goods today, thank you.

Wishing everyone a lovely half term. It is important that the children have a break, time away from screens and a re-charge... you too! See you soon. Mrs Douglas
